

John Edwards - Director Profile

John Edwards, born August 1955.

John is married with two grown up children and one grandchild.

He retired in 2015 after a career in education, including 25 years as a Head teacher, in both mainstream and special schools - leading Queenscroft Community Special School to an Outstanding Ofsted judgement in 2012- spanning the age range from 4 to 19.

Having been a school leader through the period that saw the introduction of Local Management of Schools, National Curriculum and Ofsted, together with several SEND reviews, John regards the management of change as a never ending process.

His touchstone for evaluating decisions and developments has always been the question "how will this benefit the children in our school?"

As well as being a Rotarian, John is involved in several community projects in and around his home town of Tamworth.

He is well acquainted with perseverance, being a lifelong supporter of West Bromwich Albion Football Club.
